MICHAEL L. ROSSEN; M.D., PH.D

I specialize in neurology, with a practice serving Western Massachusetts. I see and treat all neurological diseases and have a special neurological interest in Alzheimer's disease, headaches and diseases of the nerve or muscle. I have a wonderful staff, who help me to provide patients with high quality, compassionate care that we mold to be timely and effective. We try and spend a great deal of time making sure patients understand their problems, and the various treatment options available to them. I received my MD and served my residency in Neurology and my fellowship in Neurophysiology at the University of Rochester Medical Center in upstate New York. I have a Bachelor's degree in Physics and PhD in Experimental Psychology, both from Brown University.

I live with my wife Kate and our golden retriever in Amherst, MA where we raised our two daughters. I spend my free time biking, kayaking, cross-country and downhill skiing, and visiting my daughters who have moved out but continue to live close by in New England. New England is a great place to live and practice, and we especially love Western Massachusetts.
